2014 Territorial Report

by Loretta Cruz, NMLRA Territorial Coordinator

When for many of us, snow is piling up outside, it's hard to think ahead to weather that will get us outside and shooting again. Until then we'll just have to reflect back on the great year of competitive shooting that NMLRA members have had around the country. Each year the territorial program brings out some of the country's finest shooters and this past year was no exception. From sunny California to the coast of Maine, shooters had an opportunity to prove just how good they are. They certainly didn't disappoint. So grab a cup of coffee, the best seat in the house, and enjoy this year's territorial top gun report.

By the Numbers

The 2014 Territorials saw competitions in twenty-two states from coast to coast. This year we saw an increase in shooters from last year as we had 727 shooters. Those competitors shot a combined total of 1901 aggregates. Nebraska, Pennsylvania, and Iowa had the highest attendance at their territorials. Nebraska sold the most aggregates at 164, followed by Iowa (125), Pennsylvania and Missouri shared the third spot (117). This year shooters shot the offhand aggregate more than any other, the hunter's aggregate, and flintlock aggregate rounded out the top three most popular aggregates shot. The new revolver aggregate that was added this year was very well received and will continue into the 2015 territorial season. Match director Arnie Burr of Idaho had the most youth shooters with eleven. It is encouraging to see more youth taking an interest in muzzleloading sports. While the number of female competitors has stayed the same, those women appear to be participating in more aggregates and varying disciplines of shooting. The territorials are a great place to get people excited about muzzleloading shooting.

Perfect Scores

Each year I continue to be impressed by the perfect scores that people shoot, especially since that first fifty patch is still eluding me. Someday I'm going to figure out what their secret is in West Virginia, where sub-junior shooter

Reed Elliot with his 100-10x target.

Reed Elliot shot a perfect score of 100-10x and sub-junior shooter Clay Ware was near perfect with a score of 100-7x. Great shooting boys!

We have some fine youth shooters out there, not just because they can shoot an X out of the center of the target, but because they are just all around good young people. Buck Buchanan wanted us to know about one such young person, Jordan Shackelford, who was last year's junior top gun. Jordan brought a new youth shooter to the North Carolina territorial and sacrificed his time on the line to coach and help his friend, who shot an 89-x. More of us should follow this young man's example.

Changes to the Territorials

This coming territorial season will see no changes to any of the aggregates. However, shooters should be aware of some changes to how shotgun scores will be reported. Due to numerous ties in the top ten, I am requiring all match directors to report the longest string, regardless of distance or match. The string if unbroken can carry over from one match to the next. If strings are not reported and a tie occurs, the top position will be awarded to the shooter who has a reported string. Also, territorials offering shotgun matches will be allowed to offer junior matches when junior shooters are present to shoot.

Running a territorial doesn't leave much time for match directors and host club members to shoot at a territorial being held at their club. In fairness to those people who work so diligently to make sure that a territorial runs smoothly, I am offering an exchange program to match directors. The exchange program allows host club members to shoot the day before a territorial begins in exchange for one full day working for the host club. On the day that the club member is working, they may not shoot and may not have an unfair advantage. If a host club wishes to offer the work/day exchange, they must have prior approval from the territorial coordinator, make members and shooters aware that the exchange is being offered and maintain all the rules, regulations, and procedures of the NMLRA. Match directors and shooters with questions regarding the work/day exchange may contact the territorial coordinator.

What Happens to Our Medals?

How many medals can one person have? I still have the medals that I got from my first territorial because they have sentimental value. As I have become a better shooter I kept medals that I am really proud of, like the first time I got a medal in the Smoothbore Aggregate. Now that I've been shooting for quite a while, I just don't want to hang on to all of those medals. I've heard of some creative uses for territorial medals: wind chimes, under coffee table glass, given away to youth shooters, and I even heard one crafty shooter melted his gold medals down and made round balls for deer season. The majority of long time shooters actually return their medals to Friendship. Then what happens to them? For the last several years, returned medals have been stored at the NMLRA office in Friendship. During the spring nationals numerous volunteers help to sort the medals so that they can be reused and ultimately save money that will be used for program improvements. If you do have some old territorial medals that you would like to recycle, please consider returning them to the NMLRA.

The Behind the Scenes People

Often people don't see all of the little things that go into making a territorial a success. The club member who gets up early to have the first pot of coffee ready, the lady who lines up all the medals before the awards ceremony or the man who sweeps the clubhouse and empties the trash after everyone has left the range. Each year I give match directors the opportunity to acknowledge the people at their clubs who do the "little" things.

In Alaska its shooters would like to recognize Keith Bayha and Pat Reed for all their hard work. Bill Browning and Philip Croft in Alabama deserve praise for helping to "stage" the territorial there each year. One day I hope to get down to the Alabama shotgun territorial where Sam Gladden, and Jerry and Yvonne Knight put on a fish fry and low country boil for shooters. Arnie Burr would like to thank Jim Lawrence and his two girls for their hard work. Kentucky territorials wouldn't run smoothly without the assistance of Kim Sullivan, Ruth Robinson, Carol Winburn, and Randy Henderson. The Tobacco River Muzzleloaders want to thank the "Kitchen Crew" and non member helpers Deo Freeman and Cari Jefferson, thanks for all you do. The territorial program could not run without all these and many more helping hands.

I mentioned earlier that many match directors never get to shoot at their own territorial. Rick Reed each year steps up at Vermont by running the range, scoring targets, and working the grill, allowing Harland Blodgett to shoot one or two aggregates. This year Rick went one step further and volunteered to run the Maine territorial so that Mike Davis could shoot at the territorial as well. By helping out in North Carolina, Mike Willard allowed Match Director Buchanan to shoot his aggregates. The help and support of these folks was greatly appreciated.

In a time of great sadness, Leonard Sisil stepped in to help at the last minute for Match Director Greg Parrott, at the passing of Greg's beloved wife Linda. Honey Creek Rifle Works sponsored the Illinois Territorial in memory of Linda Parrott who departed this world August 24, 2014.

As I do every year I want to acknowledge the hard work of Joyce Vogel in the NMLRA office; she keeps me organized and up to date on what I need to know. Without her knowledge, understanding, and patience I would be lost. I would also like to say a big thank you to my father, Robert Cruz. Not only did he teach me to shoot my first muzzleloader, he also spent countless hours scraping the labels off of nearly 2,000 medals this summer. He truly loves me and the sport of muzzleloading.

The territorial program remains the primary way to offer competitive shooting opportunities to its members outside of the national shooting opportunities at Friendship and Phoenix. Please support this program by attending a territorial in your area, by bringing a friend or loved one with you to compete or by sharing your enthusiasm for our sport with a youngster.

All the best to each of you at the 2015 Territorials.
